About Me

I am a passionate chef who has spent the past two years honing my culinary skills at a prestigious 4-star hotel. My time in the culinary world has been an incredible journey, but I've now set my sights on a new challenge in the realm of front-end development.

With no formal degree, I've embraced the world of self-study and online education to build my coding skills. I'm studying at FreeCodeCamp, where I've earned certifications in Responsive Web Design, JavaScript Algorithms and Data Structures, and Front-End Development Libraries. My journey in coding has been marked by a relentless pursuit of excellence, problem-solving, and creativity – qualities that I believe transition seamlessly from the kitchen to web development. I'm excited to apply my passion for detail, user experience, and the art of presentation to create captivating web interfaces and user-friendly experiences.

My culinary background has instilled in me a strong work ethic, creativity, teamwork, and a commitment to delivering excellence. These skills, coupled with my determination to learn and adapt, make me a well-rounded candidate ready to embark on an exciting career in front-end development.

I'm eager to continue my learning and contribute my skills to exciting web projects. Let's bring the same level of dedication and creativity I've applied in the kitchen to the world of coding.
